

What is your relationship with writing?

I don't like writing that much, but I do it when I have to for school. I don't mind writing something I want to write, but most of the time, for school, it is about the most boring topic ever, which I don't care about in the slightest. I've written around five essays for school, and they were all boring. My worst experience with writing was in my dual enrollment English class, where the topic was so dull that even ChatGPT struggled to fill all six pages. I don't know what else to say here, but there is still time left on the timer, so I have to keep going. I should probably get started on some of my homework because I have some due tomorrow. I can't wait to eat lunch today.